Who is Sabinet ?

Sabinet's business is information.

We have been facilitating access to electronic information for almost 30 years and strive to fulfill our users' information needs.

What is the SA ePublications Service ?

The SA ePublications service is the most comprehensive, searchable collection of full-text academic articles from South African and African journals.

It consists of the following collections:

- Business and finance
- Law
- Medicine and health
- Religion
- Social sciences and humanities
- Science, technology and agriculture

All of the above collections are combined in our full SA ePublications collection. We have over 300 titles available in this collection consisting of more than 100 000 full-text articles, from more than 170 publishers.

How can the SA ePublications assist you in your research ?

The SA ePublications service is a rich source of information right at your fingertips:

- more than 300 titles
- more than 100 000 full-text articles
- searchable (with various search functionalities)
- exclusively South African and African content
- available from your library

The collection offers:

- contents pages and full-text articles
- an alerting service for new issues added
- RSS feeds

The SA ePublications collections grow on a daily basis and offer users current and relevant information from reputable academic publications.

Sabinet also supports the Open Access Initiative. Our Open Access collection comprises almost 50 titles in all subject fields.

African Journal Archive

The African Journal Archive is a retrospective digitisation project, focusing on African journals.

The collection offers a digital archive of African cultural heritage and research.

This archive is made available in open access format and although it is separate from the SA ePublications, Sabinet's expertise in the field of information management is used to create and maintain this collection.
